

As a citizen of Indiana I am opposed to changing Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. I understand that the Consumer Bankers Association wants to change the law. As a citizen we should have a right to privacy in our own homes. Since the Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has been enacted my family can finally eat an evening meal and have a peaceful night without being called several time a day by telemarketers. I would suggest the rights of the individual for privacy should be greater than the right of business to make unsolicited calls. Thanks you!
